“Many of the VQ-4 aircrew over the past 20 years have likely met my Daughter, Julie Thomas. She provided logistic support to the alert crews as needed. Julie started working for the TACAMO DET in 1998, working there as a Supply Logistician issuing parts to VQ-4 crew dogs.

Julie started working for Boeing at Pax River in 1998. The E-6 Support contractors changed many times over the years, so she changed companies, but kept her job. She was instrumental in keeping the TACAMO parts database up to date and training users. Julie has now accepted a new position and is leaving the program. She received a farewell gift from the VQ-4 Chief’s Mess, which told me just how important she was to the Chief’s community. Fair Winds and Following Seas to my TACAMO daughter.”

Iced In

At preflight time at a mid-south AFB, the crew found our Herc covered with ice. The FE called base ops for a deicing truck only to find out that, being mid-south, they did not have one. When the powers at large called the Operations Control Center, the instructions were, "get the closest deicing truck." The closest deicing truck was approximately 30 miles and about an hour away; cost an exorbitant amount to rent; and had a high per-mile cost to get to and from the AFB. The commercial deicer was ruled out and the guidance was, "Get the ice off the aircraft anyway you can." In a true Improvise, Adapt, Overcome spirit, the crew took the push brooms, went out the forward overhead escape hatch, and beat the ice into submission. As the ice broke up, we swept it off the wing. Ice free, we continued our preflight and flew our mission.

Mistaken Identity

During a stop at a northeastern AFB during the Iranian Hostage Crisis, the crew Flight Engineers (FE1, FE2) and the Reel Operator (RO) went to the club for dinner and some refreshment. It is important to note that FE2 was pure Italian with an olive complexion and black, curly hair. On the taxi ride back from the club, the seating was as follows: FE1, front right, FE2, rear right, RO rear left. We were chatting with the driver until FE2 made some crude remark. At that point, FE1 exclaims, "You Iranians, we cannot take you anywhere!" The cab driver looked over his shoulder, then did a double take. He did not talk to us for the rest of the trip. The guilty party will remember; the RO does.

Update: Hearing Loss & Tinnitus Claims

Aloha TACAMO shipmates,

I was reminded by my VSO (Veterans Service Officer), in a recent conversation, that the Dept. of Veterans Affairs is the single largest bureaucracy in our government. And, that they receive thousands of disability claims per day. "Patience is required".

My case has been on file for over two years now. I have submitted all of the evidence that TCVA has compiled and offered to our membership, as well as a "buddy letter" from a long time colleague and a second VA sanctioned hearing test. I also sent a firmly written letter stating my sincerity and stated that I was insulted that my claim was initially denied. My VSO believes that I have made a good case and has elevated it to the next level of review.

I asked what my next step would be, should I be denied again. She responded that a hearing before a judge was the next step. And if he/she denies ... it's time to "suit up" and hire a lawyer.

Moving forward ... TCVA is working on getting a VSO to attend the September reunion to answer questions and guide our members to the correct people and forms necessary to file and track claims.

To track your claims go to <https://www.va.gov/resources/how-to-check-your-va-claim-appeal-or-decision-review-status-online/>

We would appreciate anyone who has found success in the claims process to share their success story and the evidence they presented to get there. Please send an email or post your story on our Facebook page. Together, we will find the key that unlocks this door.

How to find a VSO (Veterans Service Officer) <https://nvf.org/veteran-service-officers/>

TCVA is here to support you in this challenge. Members have helped bring evidence, both anecdotal and objective, to aid in VA disability claims. Once you are registered with the VA and your claim has been filed, please contact us at tacamocommunity@gmail.com to request the evidence package to support your claim.

Several of our members have been successful and are considered disabled from hearing loss and tinnitus. Others have been denied this status with no real evidence to support the denial. Stay strong, shipmates! Together we can get the recognition of our common, service-related injury.

TACAMO Career

JOHN ALGER, One-Tour Wonder (Only Served One Tour) & TCVA Vice President for Fleet Merchandising

What influenced your decision to join the military? Navy recruiting team visited the ERAU campus every semester, administering exams and taking applications.

What was your service career path? Aviation Officer Candidate School, pilot pipeline, selected for jets. Earned wings in 1974 at NAS Chase then assigned as an instructor to VT-24 flying the TA-4J Advanced Jet trainer. Next came an assignment to the NAS Chase Training Department in charge of all training devices on the station including 16 flight simulators. In 1979 I went to VA-174 for transition to the A-7E. That didn't work out and I changed designator to NFO (1320). This took me to VQ-3 following stops in Newport RI and Patuxent River MD. The squadron was less than happy that I was not attending NAV school in Mather. However, 6 months after reporting aboard I was qualified 1st NAV and a couple of months later a NAV instructor.

Of the medals, awards, and qualification badges or devices you received, what is the most meaningful to you? Why? My pilot wings – a lot of work went into earning those.

Did you participate in combat operations? If so, could you describe those which were significant to you? No. When I earned my wings in AUG 74 Vietnam was winding down. One of the reasons I got stuck in the Training Command.

Of the TACAMO squadrons you were assigned to, which one evokes the fondest memories? Why? VQ-3 – the only one I was in!

What particular memory stands out from your entire service career? Why? That would have to be my first carrier qualification. Because the USS Lexington was in a yard period when I went through basic jet (T-2C), we were just field qualified and moved on to advanced jet (TA-4J). Therefore, my first qual period was in the TA-4J. A few years later, the squadron allowed me to qual again prior to reporting to VA-174 at NAS Cecil.

Which individual from your TACAMO service stands out as the one who had the biggest impact on you? Why? That would be two: John Keilty and Vern Lochausen. John was plane commander on my crew and was a great motivator for the entire crew. He loved fun but that never got in the way of our business. Vern came a bit later after we moved to Hawaii. His influence was more subtle and not realized until later, but he gave me the confidence that I was better than some others thought.

How has military service influenced the way you have approached your life and career? I began my aviation career at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University which lead me to the Navy. The skills learned at both gave me a career that spanned nearly 50 years.

In what ways has TCVA helped you maintain a bond with your service and those you served with? At our reunions we have re-connected with past friends and made many new ones!

Tester ends production after 79 years

Dear Readers,

NAS Patuxent River's Tester newspaper will be ending its production run after 79 years. In its place, Adams Publishing Group will run a monthly magazine featuring news from NAS Patuxent River and its mission partners.

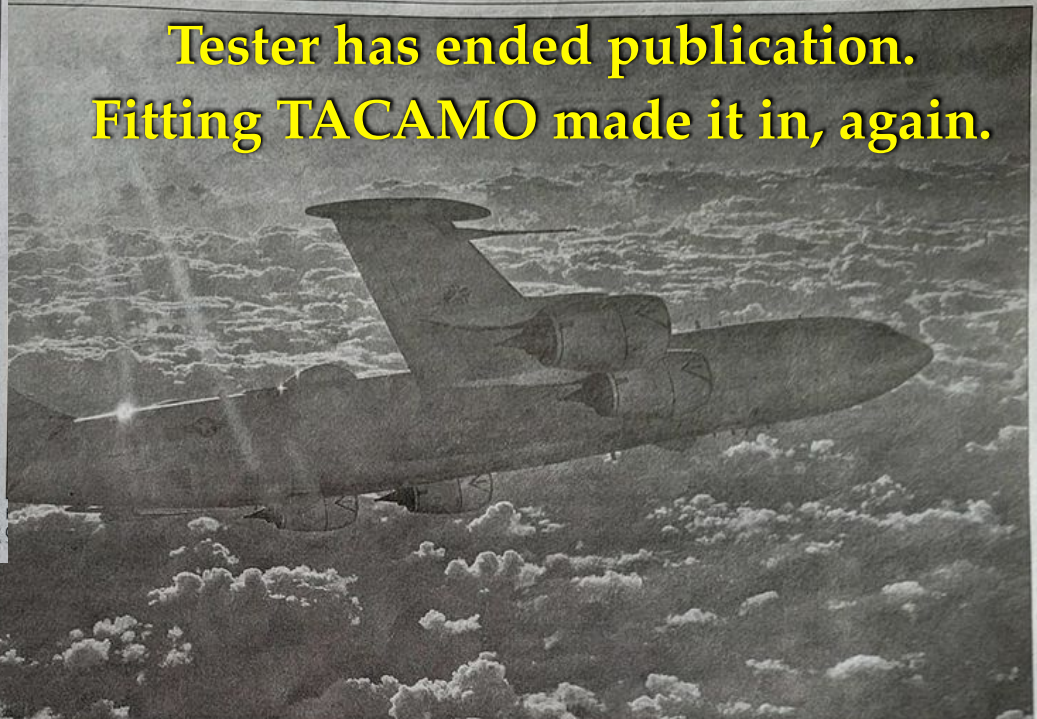

In its nearly 80-year run, Tester has featured information from groundbreaking achievements in flight to the personal achievements of staff and residents. We appreciate our readers sticking with us all this time, and the personnel who have made the publication what it is.

We continue to release information on our social media feeds at www.facebook.com/NASPaxRiver on Facebook, @NASPaxRiverPAO on Twitter, and nas_patuxent_river, and @nas_patuxent_river on Instagram. Other sources for Pax River information is available on our command DVIDS page at <https://www.dvidshub.net/unit/NASPR> and on the CNIC website at https://www.cnic.navy.mil/regions/ndw/installations/nas_patuxent_river/news/news_releases.html.

The E-6B Mercury provides an important link in the nation's strategic nuclear deterrence.

U.S. NAVY PHOTOS BY ERIK HILDEBRANDT

Providing strategic nuclear communications link now, future

From NAVAIR Public Affairs

The E-6B Mercury provides an important link in the nation's strategic nuclear deterrence. It allows survivable communication between the president and the triad of nuclear weapon systems — bombers, missile fields, and ballistic missile submarines.

Sustaining this mission while preparing for the future is becoming even more important as global competition grows.

"This is a critical time for our country," said Chief of Naval Operations Operations Adm. Mike Gilday in a prepared statement to the House Appropriations Committee, Jan 12. "The People's Republic of China and Russia are using all elements of their national power to undermine U.S. interests in the global commons."

Keeping the link of communication open is a "no-fail" mission and one the Airborne Strategic Command, Control and Communications Program Office continues to help accomplish by sustaining the E-6B while also preparing for the future with a recapitalization aircraft.

"Our people understand the mission and the importance of sustaining this vital asset," said Capt. Adam Scott, program manager. "They know why these aircraft always need to be ready to go."

During the past year, the program office made several significant sustainment efforts to support the fleet. Spar chord corrosion and stress corrosion cracks were discovered during in-service and depot maintenance. The current spar chord material became obsolete and the team quickly qualified a new material. Manufacturing new spar chords required converting the original 2D drawings into 3D digital files.

An additively manufactured fuel dump manifold was approved for use on the aircraft. The component replaces casted hardware that has been a sustainment concern while saving lead-time over the re-development of traditional casting tooling.

"Being able to look at and attack these sustainment issues as an enterprise has really helped us," Scott said. "The collaboration across the Naval Aviation Enterprise has been invaluable."

In September, the fully qualified additively manufactured water separator was approved for use on fleet aircraft. The units are replacing legacy separators that had been a top concern for the past two years.

The program procured a United Kingdom E-3D for use as an E-6B trainer aircraft, which will help increase aircraft availability and readiness.

"The aging aircraft is making it more of a challenge to maintain but we continue to find ways to get the job done and provide operational readiness," Scott said.

The airframe has been around for more than three decades with the Navy accepting the first E-6A in 1989 to perform the Take Charge and Move Out mission. The aircraft were then modified into the E-6B with added workstations and specialized equipment. The first E-6B aircraft arrived in 1997 with the fleet modification complete by 2003.

"Sustaining our readiness has never been more vital to our nation's future," Gilday said. "Meanwhile, our force design requires a relentless focus on modernization to keep our platforms relevant."

With that in mind, the program has been working on a recapitalization aircraft (E-XX) that will take over the TACAMO mission. The program will use a variant of the militarized C-130J Super Hercules for E-XX TACAMO testing.

The Department of Defense currently uses the C-130J in multiple services, and it is deployed at various bases worldwide. The program office will be acquiring three non-configured aircraft for testing.

The program is also working on communications and mission systems integration contracts for the recapitalization aircraft to help modernize the strategic nuclear deterrent.

"For the nation and our allies, we are making sure the president can reach our strategic forces now and in the future," Scott said.

FLASHBACK FRIDAY:

Submitted by Vern Lochausen, TCVA Historian View conversation on FB page <https://www.facebook.com/groups/tacamo.veterans>

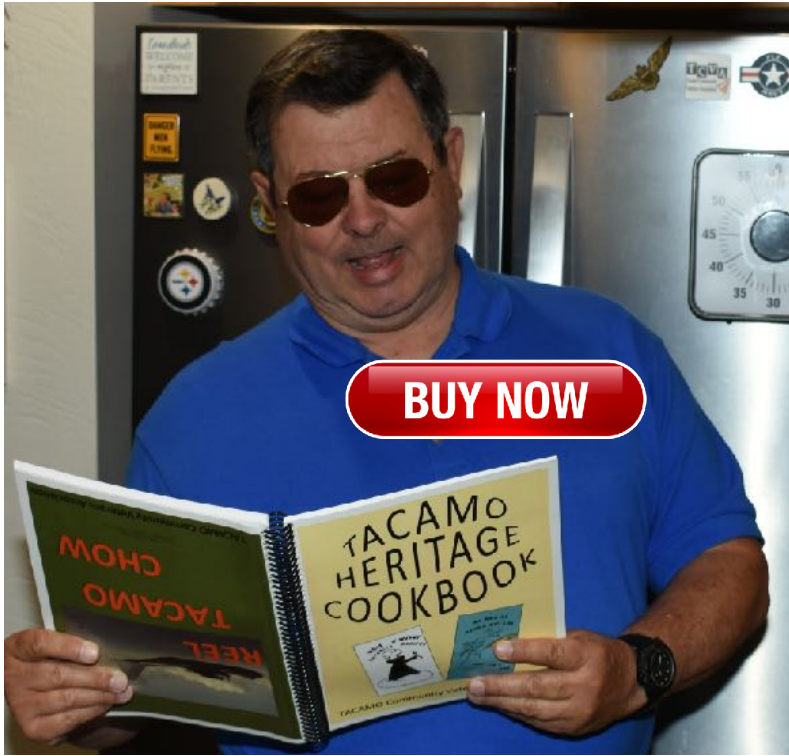

The secret/sacred 'scroll' was a tool developed in OPS to layout 100% Coverage. Literally a roll of graph paper with a green grid, The Scroll was created by a group of RM and JOs, graphically displaying crew, date and time, mission length, departure and landing locations and duration of crew rest. Then the standard classified message to bases were created by the RMs and sent out. And then when all approved the whole schedule went to headquarters. Bribes, begging, snivel chits, favors, beers, seniority, etc. sometimes influenced who went where when. The Crew Wheel ensured key jobs in the squadron, DH and assistant were 'port and starboard' in the office to keep things running. When computers came in the 80, as brand new OPS BOSS in 3, I scrolled down the print out with a ruler and discovered we had scheduled a 'BUST' or gap in coverage. I then created a cardboard template with windows cut out showing first crew's land time and next crew's takeoff so I could ensure they overlapped. My Flight Officer, LT Mark Barber had it bronzed and presented at my farewell. Ah.....those were the days!

Great gift for the family!

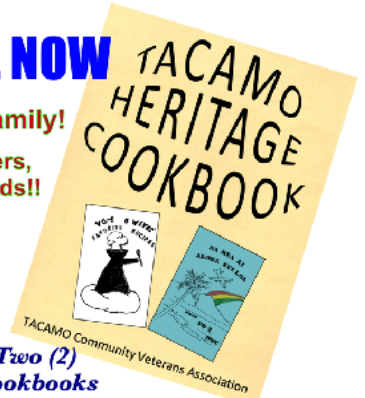

Don't forget teachers, neighbors and friends!!

TCVA is proud to offer a treasured collection of family recipes. If your original VQ-3 or VQ-4 cookbook is tattered and torn, you are going to want this cookbook.

The TACAMO Heritage Cookbook recipes are compiled from the VQ-4 Officers Wives Club, VQ-4 All Wives Club, VQ-3 Officers Wives Club, and TACAMO family recipes from Guam, Hawaii, Patuxent River, and Oklahoma.

REEL TACAMO CHOW (RTC) shares recipes from Reel Operators and other crew positions who cooked and fed their crews in flight and in the hooch. We are grateful for their contributions to the crews' well-being and the recipes in this cookbook. Spoiler Alert, there are honest Sea Stories scattered throughout the book.

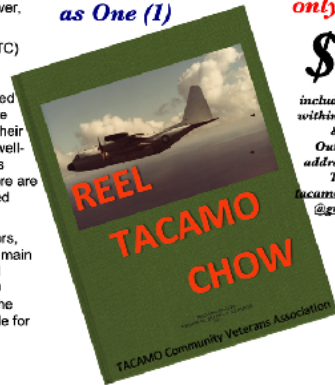

Over 200 pages of appetizers, soups, salads, side dishes, main dishes, desserts, gravy and sauces. The Reel TACAMO Chow features recipes for the 16-20 person crews, suitable for large gatherings.

TACAMO Family

Aloha TACAMO Family,

Yes, we are family, a family of families, all joined together by our mission and common TACAMO experience. Whether you are/were deploying flight crew, ground pounder, or detachment personnel, or served the mission as civilian or industry worker, families were left back home. Even if it was for a short time, our families were back home stayed strong, supported the mission, and your commitment to your job.

The former "wives clubs" and now "spouse clubs" got together to provide additional support for the other families who were temporarily without their "sailor". Whether it was to watching the kids while shopping was done, or picking up a child from school, or just to lending an ear to a lonely and frustrated neighbor, The TACAMO families supported and continue to support each other.

TCVA wants to recognize the unsung heroes' support and sacrifices that keep morale high and make life a little easier for the entire community. Spouses and children are as much a members of our Association as the sailor/veteran.

We were all brought together accidentally by a detailer selected by our qualifications and availability. It was each of us, as individuals, who found the way to be the right cog on the wheel, to drive our mission to success. A 'Band of Brothers/Sisters', working together, to perform a difficult, complex, and significant mission. That spirit of companionship extended beyond the mission, to the individuals and their families that we relied on to keep us safe, in flight, and in our neighborhoods. This is the glue that holds this community together.

Again this year, we celebrate this fraternity, after a few years of COVID restrictions. Anxious to hug our longtime friends and raise a glass to those who couldn't attend. This is the spirit that Bill "Buff" Crowell inspired with his many reunion picnics. That spirit was the genesis of our Association. We will raise a glass to Buff and celebrate the family he helped bring together. Our TACAMO family!

Family Memory Submitted by John Burgoon: "I am sure the flight crews did not realize how much the deployments affected the home life. We were doing our jobs. Bill hammered it home one day in Hawaii. VQ-3 held its children's Christmas party in the hangar. Among the gifts the kids got were two miniature C-130s. Soon after that, the family got in the car to go somewhere. Patty had two C-130s, Bill had one. Patty asked Bill where his other C-130 was. Without missing a beat, Bill replied, "It's deployed!"

Linda and I just looked at each other in amazement." John "Mom" Burgoon, VQ-3 1972-74, VQ-4 1977-80, VQ3 1981-84 & TCVA Secretary

Fallen Shipmates

I FLEW

by Brad Baker

When the last checklist's run and the bag drag is done,
I'll reminisce on the days I once knew,
I won't remember the oh-three-hundred alerts,
But only that I flew!

I will not remember the crew rest in tents,
Nor recall how cold Arctic winds blew,
And I'll try not to remember the times I got sick,
But only that I flew!

I will never forget when nature became angry,
To challenge my intrepid crew,
I'll always remember the fear I felt,
And the pride in knowing I flew.

I'll remember the sights my mortal eyes saw,
All colored in multiple hues,
Those beautiful lights on cold winter nights,
Seen only by those who flew.

God was extremely good to me,
He let me touch his face,
He saw my crew through war and peace,
And blessed us with His grace.

So when I stand at St. Peter's Gate,
And tell him that I'm new,
I know he'll smile and welcome me,
Because he knows
I FLEW!

VA burial benefits can help service members, Veterans, and their family members plan and pay for a burial or memorial service in a VA Cemetery... you are guaranteed a space in that cemetery, but not a specific spot. Spot is assigned when someone notifies the cemetery that the veteran has passed. Having that arranged takes part of the load off the family. The burials-memorials link also explains how to apply for a burial allowance to help pay for a Veteran's funeral services, burial, and transportation costs.
